

SPC ECO

You're Alright/Another Day

SPC ECO are Rose Berlin (vocals), Joey Levenson (guitars), Dean Garcia (bass, programming), and Harry KG (guitars) and they release their debut two track seven inch single You're Alright/Another Day on AC30 on 14th January 2008.

You may know something about troublesome noisenik Dean Garcia from the seminal Curve identity but you probably know very little about Rose Berlin. This is set to change. Rose Berlin is eighteen years old and has a voice and attitude to die for. Whilst most girls her age might be looking to sell their mothers on e-bay for a slot on Fame Idol (or whatever its called) she has another mission entirely - to one day possess that cool, bad ass I don't give a shit attitude of Karen O from the Yeah Yeah Yeahs or Brody Dalle from The Distillers. This is mere teenage envy naturally because if you've seen anything of Rose Berlin at all you'll know by now that that she is well on her way to something else entirely - her own identity. Another generation gets fat on its own creative ennui and Rose Berlin just says that a simple guitar line can be enough to make her cry. Which is something you are never gonna hear on Fame Idol. Or whatever its called.

SPC ECO came as much as anything from the brain of US born, Japanese/Korean interpreter Joey Levenson (an avid collector of vintage fuzz tones, Roland Space Echos, Analog Delays, Oddball Japanese and Zvex Pedals) and seventeen year old guitar prodigy and young filmmaker Harry KG.

Oh yeah the music: You're Alright and Another Day are perfect slabs of nu-gaze/dreamwave MBV-styled histrionics – a heroic way to start the New Year.
